KAZAKHSTAN: 134 administrative prosecutions in 2020

By Felix Corley, Forum 18 (<https://www.forum18.org>)

In 134 known administrative prosecutions in 2020, 114 individuals (one twice), three charities and one company were punished for worship meetings, offering religious literature and items (including online), sharing or teaching faith, posting religious material online, or praying in mosques. At least 14 fines were imposed in January 2021. Deputy Chair Anuar Khatiyev of the regime's Religious Affairs Committee refused to discuss why individuals should face prosecution and punishment for exercising their right to freedom of religion or belief.

Kazakhstan's authorities are known to have brought at least 134 administrative prosecutions in 2020 to punish 129 individuals (one twice), three charities and one company for their exercise of freedom of religion or belief. Of these, 119 ended with convictions, with 114 individuals (one twice), three charities, and one commercial company being punished. Almost all of the punishments included fines. However, the true number of such administrative cases is likely to be higher.

Administrative prosecutions have continued in 2021, with at least 14 known fines in January (see below).

The 134 known administrative cases in 2020 are a reduction from 2019 in the number of prosecutions. This may be because of the coronavirus pandemic and the consequent halting of public events (including meetings for worship) for much of 2020. This gave the regime fewer opportunities in 2020 for raids and prosecutions of people for exercising their freedom of religion and belief.

In 2019 there were a total of 168 such known prosecutions (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532), in 2018 a total of 171 such known prosecutions (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2447), and in 2017 a total of 284 known such prosecutions (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2347).

Punishments in 2020 included temporary bans on unspecified activity, verbal reprimands, and fines for among other things selling Bibles, New Testaments, Korans, and religious jewellery online, as well as teaching children to read the Koran without state permission, saying the word Amen in mosques, and posting the sermons of clerics of the state-controlled Muslim Board online. There were also three court orders to destroy religious books (see full list below).

Books ordered destroyed can be either "disposed off at a general rubbish dump" or, as the Justice Ministry has stated, "burnt". Human rights defender Yevgeny Zhovtis of the Kazakhstan International Bureau for Human Rights and the Rule of Law, which has with other human rights groups been banned for three months from January 2020, commented that "it is barbarism to destroy books" (see below).

Deputy Chair Anuar Khatiyev of the regime's Religious Affairs Committee (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409) refused absolutely to discuss why individuals should face prosecution and punishment for exercising their right to freedom of religion or belief. "We at the Committee don't initiate such cases," he insisted to Forum 18 (see below).

Muslims, Council of Churches Baptists, Jehovah's Witnesses, a Hare Krishna devotee, and commercial and private sellers were many of the targets of these prosecutions.

Fines were mostly the equivalent of between three weeks' and four months' average wages for those in formal work (35 to 200 Monthly Financial Indicators, MFIs, 97,230 Tenge to 555,600 Tenge from 1 April 2020).

Many of the prosecutions were to punish meetings for worship without state permission. Five Muslims were fined in the western city of Zhanaozen on 24 August 2020 for praying the Id al-Adha morning prayers at a car market. Company employees were fined for allowing staff to use rooms for prayer. One Muslim in the capital Nur-Sultan was fined for leading the "unregistered form of Sufism". Council of Churches Baptists – who refuse to seek state permission to exercise their right to freedom of religion or belief – were fined for holding worship meetings.

Police Departments for the Struggle with Extremism hunt "offenders"

Police Departments for the Struggle with Extremism are recorded in eight court decisions as discovering that individuals have committed an "offence", though they may have been involved in more without this being noted in court decisions. They identified four individuals as offering religious materials for sale in shops, three individuals for posting religious materials online, and two individuals for offering to sell religious material online.

One of the sellers, Natalya Golyashova, offered religious jewellery for sale on the online shopping site Olx.kz. She then received a phone call from a man who wanted to view the items. "The men arrived, turned over the small objects in their hands, then showed their badges as officers of the Department for the Struggle with Extremism," she told the Caravan.kz news website for an 8 January 2021 article. "They said that they were taking everything for expert analysis (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409)."

Golyashova insisted in her appeal that "I have not harmed anyone, I am not a distributor of such things, moreover this is the first time. I am raising on my own a disabled daughter who needs constant care. Due to the imposed fine, my daughter and I will have a very difficult time. I am not such a bad delinquent to punish my child as well." The appeal court changed the fine and ban on activity to a verbal reprimand.

Senior Lieutenant K. Atymkanov of the Police Department for the Struggle with Extremism had discovered and reported Golyashova for offering the items for sale. His colleagues told Forum 18 on 2 February that he was on leave and that only he could answer questions.

The regime's censorship of religious literature and objects restricts both what can be sold or offered, and where it can be sold or offered (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409).

Forum 18 asked if Senior Lieutenant Atymkanov had been the only officer in the Department to spend time on hunting individuals offering religious materials for sale on line, and whether the Department regarded such individuals as "extremists". On hearing these questions the duty officer put the phone down.

"Illegal" online sales

At least 29 individuals are known to have been prosecuted in 2020 for offering religious books or materials for sale online, a rise on earlier years (24 in 2019 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532), 18 in 2018 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2447), 10 in 2017 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2347)). Most were punished for offering such materials for sale on the online shopping site Olx.kz.

Among the items Olx.kz lists on the help section of its website as being illegal to sell are "Religious literature and other informational materials of religious content". The website appears to have added this information in late 2020, after a number of prosecutions that year (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2558).

A 20 September 2018 decision fining Zaur Kerimov for offering icons for sale (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532) noted that: "By a decree of 4 June 2014, East Kazakhstan Regional Akimat (administration) confirmed the location of the specialised, stationary premises for the distribution of religious literature and other informational materials of religious content, as well as items of religious significance, in which the Olx website is absent."

Court decisions punishing offering religious materials for sale online list the places local authorities allow to sell such religious materials. "Placements of private advertisements on Olx.kz are not included in places specially designated by local executive bodies of regions, cities of republican significance and the capital", the 30 November 2020 decision in the case of Yuliya Leshkova states. Several other court decisions include similar wording.

Forum 18 asked Olx.kz in writing on 31 January 2019 what measures it takes to try to ensure that users of its website do not suffer (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532) from the regime's censorship of religious literature and objects (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409), and whether customers have complained to the company over punishments for offering religious items for sale on its platform. Forum 18 had received no response by the end of the working day in Kazakhstan on 2 February 2021.

"We don't aim to fine people," Aibat Tulegenov of West Kazakhstan Region Religious Affairs Department told Inform.kz on 27 October 2020. He added that the Department had written to Olx.kz to explain the law that bans selling religious materials online.

Tulegenov insisted that officials are simply enforcing the law. "The law bans selling religious materials without permission," he told Forum 18 from Oral on 2 February 2021. "I'm a state servant and have to obey the law."

Destroying books, "harassment"

In three cases in 2020, courts ordered seized religious books to be destroyed. In 2019, such court orders to destroy seized religious literature were more common. They were:

- 29 Muslim books seized from a commercial seller in Kyzylorda (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2488);
- 18 Islamic books seized from another commercial seller also in Kyzylorda;
- two Islamic books a visitor from Kyrgyzstan had in her luggage;
- four Muslim leaflets seized from a Muslim in Aktobe;
- one Kyrgyz-language Islamic book seized from a visitor from Kyrgyzstan;
- and two Christian booklets (one of them co-written by a Russian Orthodox priest) seized from a Protestant in Aktobe.

Books ordered destroyed can be either "disposed off at a general rubbish dump" or, as the Justice Ministry has stated, "burnt" (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409). Human rights defender Zhovtis of the Kazakhstan International Bureau for Human Rights and the Rule of Law commented on this that "it is barbarism to destroy books".

The Bureau for Human Rights and the Rule of Law was along with other human rights groups banned by the regime in January 2020 from operating for three months (<https://www.bureau.kz/en/news/governments-war-on-ngos-claims-more-victims/>).

In 2019, police began using Administrative Code Article 449, Part 1 ("Harassment in public places") to punish with small summary fines individuals sharing their faith. Police issued three such fines in 2019 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532), but courts overturned all three on appeal. In 2020, the second year of known such cases related to the exercise of freedom of religion or belief, police in March handed a Jehovah's Witness a summary fine for sharing her faith. The woman chose not to appeal.

Punishments

Fines are the most common punishment, with fines for individuals mostly being between three weeks' and two months' average wages. For pensioners and those without formal work, such fines can be a heavy burden. Individuals who are punished for offering religious materials for sale online often tell the courts that they are desperately short of money and are trying to sell any property they no longer need. This does not stop judges from fining them.

In addition to fines, courts often ban individuals from activity for three months. Sometimes the ban is unspecific, leaving individuals unclear about what they can and cannot do. In other cases courts ban specific activities, for example distributing religious materials (which is in any case illegal without state permission). The hardest-hitting bans are on those running shops, as a three-month ban could leave owners and employees with no income.

Those who refuse or fail to pay fines can be placed on the list of debtors who are banned from leaving the country (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2574). Council of Churches Baptists refuse to pay fines on principle, arguing that they should not be punished for exercising their right to freedom of religion or belief. Many have spent years on the exit ban list. Aleksei Asetov, for example, has been banned from leaving Kazakhstan since 2011 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409).

"I have been banned from leaving Kazakhstan since October 2013," Council of Churches Baptist Nikolai Novikov told Forum 18 from Oral on 29 January, less than two weeks after his most recent fine (see below). "They took one of the fines directly from my wages, but I refused to pay the others. We don't consider ourselves guilty, so we don't pay."

Intimidation

In addition to the administrative cases actually brought, police and prosecutors often use the threat of such cases to intimidate individuals who have been exercising their right to freedom of religion or belief.

Between September 2019 and October 2020, Jehovah's Witnesses note that police detained 91 individuals for sharing their faith with others. Although the police did not pursue administrative or criminal charges, 15 of these were threatened with fines and 9 received a "written explanation of the law".

Prosecutions continue in 2021

Prosecutions have continued in 2021, with 14 known cases in January.

1, 2) On 8 January police fined two Council of Churches Baptists Dmitry Isayev and Vladimir Nelepin in Oral (Uralsk) for holding a worship meeting without state permission. The meeting was raided by police.

- 3) On 5 January Boris Levchenko in Oskemen was fined by a court for offering a small metal cross for sale online.
- 4) On 6 January Askhat Kenesbayev in Ekibastuz was fined by a court for offering a copy of the Koran for sale online.
- 5) On 12 January Azat Tursynbayev was fined by a court in Karakiya for saying the word Amen during prayers in mosque.
- 6) On 14 January Sufi Muslim leader Abdulkarim Khasan was fined by a court in Nur-Sultan for alleged preaching without state permission.
- 7) Also on 14 January, Alyona Aidina in Pavlodar was fined by a court for offering a copy of the Koran for sale online.
- 8) On 18 January Council of Churches Baptist Nikolai Novikov was fined by a court in Oral for offering religious literature for free on the streets.
- 9) On 19 January Almaz Dyusenov in Atyrau was fined by a court for posting religious materials online.
- 10) Also on 19 January, Sherba Yuburov was fined by a court in Kordai for teaching Koran to children.
- 11) On 28 January Mukhammed Toleu was fined by a court in Aktobe for leading Muslim prayers without state permission.
- 12) Also on 28 January, Ali Kartbayev was fined by a court in Kyzylkoga for saying the word Amen during prayers in mosque.
- 13) Also on 28 January, Muratbek Tolegenov was fined by a court in Kyzylkoga for saying the word Amen during prayers in mosque.
- 14) Also on 28 January, Iliyas Duisen was fined by a court in Kyzylkoga for saying the word Amen during prayers in mosque.

Known 2020 cases

Known administrative cases for exercising freedom of religion and belief in the 2020 calendar year totalled 134 (in comparison to 168 in 2019 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532), 171 in 2018 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2447) and 284 in 2017 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2347)). Those targeted in 2020 were:

- 19 individuals for meeting for worship without state permission, hosting such meetings or maintaining places for such meetings (37 in 2019, 40 in 2018, 88 in 2017).
- 4 individuals for offering religious materials to others for free without state permission (15 in 2019, 10 in 2018, 39 in 2017).
- 26 (25 individuals and 1 company) for offering religious literature, icons or other items for sale without state permission (30 in 2019, 34 in 2018, 58 in 2017).
- 29 individuals for offering religious items for sale online without state permission (24 in 2019, 18 in 2018, 10 in 2017).
- 28 individuals for posting religious materials online without state permission (33 in 2019, 23 in 2018, 12 in 2017).
- 1 individual for trying to import religious literature without state permission (4 in 2019, 0 in 2018, 4 in 2017).
- 10 individuals for sharing faith with others without state permission (8 in 2019, 17 in 2018, 31 in 2017).
- 9 Muslims (1 twice) for praying in mosques in ways that the state-controlled Muslim Board has banned, for example by using the word "Amen" (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409) (9 in 2019, 21 in 2018, 22 in 2017, the first year such punishments were imposed).
- 7 (4 individuals and 3 charities) for teaching their faith to children without state permission (4 in 2019, 3 in 2018, 2 in 2017).

A total of 129 of the 134 known 2020 cases were heard in court, but a warning to a Jehovah's Witness couple was issued by a regional Religious Affairs Department, while three fines (on a Council of Churches Baptist, a Muslim and a Jehovah's Witness) are known to have been summarily handed down by police (the total number could be higher). In 2019, police are known to have issued 20 such summary fines.

Of the 130 administrative cases known to have been brought against individuals in 2020, 85 were against men and 45 against women. Women represented about half of individuals prosecuted to punish offering religious literature and other items for sale in shops and online.

Three 2020 administrative cases began as criminal cases

Of the 127 known administrative prosecutions against individuals in 2020, at least three began as cases under the Criminal Code. One initial investigation was under Criminal Code Article 174 ("Incitement of social, national, clan, racial, or religious discord, insult to the national honour and dignity or religious feelings of citizens, as well as propaganda of exclusivity, superiority or inferiority of citizens on grounds of their religion, class, national, generic or racial identity, committed publicly or with the use of mass media or information and communication networks, as well as by production or distribution of literature or other information media, promoting social, national, clan, racial, or religious discord"). Kazakh human rights defenders and the UN Human Rights Committee have repeatedly called for this Article to be reworded or abolished (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532).

Another initial investigation was under Criminal Code Article 313 ("Illegal distribution of material propagandising the cult of brutality and violence"). The Criminal Case Article in the third case is not specified in the administrative case court decision.

Such criminal cases – particularly Article 174 cases – are normally used by the regime to jail prisoners of conscience for exercising their freedom of religion and belief. There are 17 known such current prisoners of conscience (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2532), all Muslim men.

The administrative cases in these three cases were launched when prosecutors decided not to pursue criminal cases.

No individuals are known to have been prosecuted for allowing children to be present or conducting religious rites against the wishes of one parent (1 in 2019, 1 in 2018, 9 in 2017).

No religious communities are known to have been prosecuted for "inadequate" security or security measures for their places of worship, for example not having enough video cameras (2 in 2019, 2 in 2018, 5 in 2017).

No individuals are known to have been prosecuted for failing to pay earlier fines to punish them for exercising the right to freedom of religion or belief without state permission (0 in 2019, 2 in 2018, 2 in 2017).

No foreign citizens are known to have been ordered deported (0 in 2019, 1 in 2018, 2 in 2017).

Still "no problems in the area of freedom of conscience"?

The telephone of the Chair of the Religious Affairs Committee of the Information and Social Development Ministry (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2409) in the capital Nur-Sultan, Yerzhan Nukezhanov, went unanswered each time Forum 18 called on 2 February.

Reached the same day, a Committee Deputy Chair Anuar Khatiyev refused absolutely to discuss why individuals should face prosecution and punishment for exercising their right to freedom of religion or belief. "We at the Committee don't initiate such cases," he insisted to Forum 18. Given a summary of some of the cases Forum 18 has found, he responded: "I would have to find the details." After repeatedly refusing to answer any questions he put the phone down.

The telephones at the Committee department that monitors legal cases punishing the exercise of freedom of religion or belief also went unanswered on 2 February.

In January 2020, Yerzhan Omar, the department's "expert", had refused to give Forum 18 details of the full number of such administrative prosecutions in 2019, saying the information is for "official use only". He also refused to explain why individuals, communities and a company are known to have faced such prosecutions in 2019.

Omar similarly refused to explain why 25 prisoners of conscience were then serving sentences for exercising freedom of religion or belief (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article\_id=2529). "We have no problems in the area of freedom of conscience," Omar claimed to Forum 18.
