RUSSIA: Wide-ranging blocking of religious-related websites

By Victoria Arnold, Forum 18 (<https://www.forum18.org>)

Russia blocks: websites, apps and Wikipedia pages related to Jehovah's Witnesses and Muslim sites related to theologian Said Nursi (blocked as "extremist"); a website supporting LGBT+ people in religious communities; religious sites criticising Russia's war against Ukraine, including Christians Against War, and Christianity Today; Ukrainian religious sites, including of the Orthodox Church of Ukraine and of religious news sites; social media sites of those opposing the war on religious grounds, such as Fr Ioann Kurmoyarov; and news and NGO sites which include coverage of freedom of religion or belief violations.

The regime's ever-increasing internet censorship has seen religious websites and materials blocked for: "extremist" content; opposition to Russia's war against Ukraine from a religious perspective; and material supporting LGBT+ people in religious communities. Also blocked are Ukraine-based religious websites, social media of prosecuted individuals, and news and NGO sites which include coverage of freedom of religion or belief violations.

This also denies local people freedom of expression in religion-related matters and the opportunity freely to seek information and views on religious issues. It also has a chilling effect on those considering publishing their views on issues related to religion which the regime dislikes.

Many of the blocked religious-related websites are listed at the foot of this article.

Internet users in parts of Ukraine Russia has illegally occupied face the same Roskomnadzor blocking that users face within Russia's internationally recognised boundaries.

Communications regulator Roskomnadzor blocks access to websites (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2934), demands that even foreign sites remove information deemed to threaten state security or public order in Russia, monitors (with the security services) the use of social media, and is exploring the use of artificial intelligence to make all these processes more efficient.

Websites may be blocked specifically for their religious content (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2934), if this is associated with material or religious organisations which courts have already outlawed as "extremist", as in the case of Jehovah's Witnesses' sites and even Wikipedia pages about them. This also includes sites supporting LGBT+ people in religious communities (see below).

The majority of religious sites, however, have become subject to "military" censorship since Russia's full-scale invasion of Ukraine in February 2022, with any opposition to the war being taken as grounds for preventing access (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2934). Similarly, several individuals who have been prosecuted for protesting against the war in religious terms or from a religious perspective have found their social media profiles blocked by order of Roskomnadzor (see below).

Roskomnadzor has also blocked a large number of websites of media outlets, civil society organisations, and human rights groups (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2934) which have reported on violations of freedom of religion and belief. While their coverage of such issues is not typically the reason for the blocking, restricting access to their work on freedom of religion or belief further reduces the space for discussion of the topic inside Russia (see below).

Beyond their immediate impact, the concrete measures state agencies take to restrict access to online information also has a chilling effect on freedom of expression in general, with Freedom House noting in its 2023 report on Russia (<https://freedomhouse.org/country/russia/freedom-net/2023>) an increase in self-censorship when writing about "controversial" topics.

The majority of religious websites now inaccessible by readers in Russia (without a VPN) appear to have been blocked "openly" – that is, Roskomnadzor has added them to the publicly searchable registry of sites (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2934) which Russian internet providers are obliged to prevent their customers from seeing.

A few, however, are not in the registry, yet still appear to be inaccessible (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2934) to some or all internet users inside Russia. It is unclear why this might be – it is possible that such sites have fallen victim to the filtering of internet traffic through Roskomnadzor's "technical means of countering threats" (TSPUs – see below), that smaller, local internet providers may be blocking access or having technical problems, or in the case of sites hosted abroad, the websites' servers may be blocking access requests from Russia.

Forum 18 wrote to Roskomnadzor and its subsidiary, the Main Radio Frequency Centre on 25 September, to ask:

- why sites are blocked for the expression of religious opinions, including on war in general or the war in Ukraine;
- why sites are being blocked without being added to the publicly searchable registry;
- as well as to ask for clarification of technical details of blocking.

Roskomnadzor Press Service's response of 26 September did not answer Forum 18's questions and asked which sites Forum 18 was referring to.

BLOCKED RELIGIOUS-RELATED WEBSITES

The list of some of the blocked religious-related websites below is based on searches of Roskomnadzor's Unified Registry, use of internet censorship monitoring services (such as Roskomsvoboda and GlobalCheck), and reports by site owners and users.

Religious websites blocked for "extremist" content

Since the mid-2000s, courts in Russia have had literature associated with Jehovah's Witnesses and with late Turkish Islamic theologian Said Nursi ruled "extremist" and added to the Justice Ministry's Federal List of Extremist Materials (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2897).

In 2008, the Supreme Court outlawed "Nurdzhular" (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2897), an association based on Nursi's teachings which Muslims in Russia deny has ever existed as a formal entity, leading to prosecutions for "continuing the activity of an extremist organisation" of people who meet to study Nursi's works. For example, on 10 July 2024 Zurab Dzhabrailov was jailed for 6 years and Dzheykhun Rustamov was jailed for 2 years and 9 months (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2922), for "continuing the activity of a banned extremist organisation".

In 2017, the Supreme Court banned and ordered liquidated the Jehovah's Witness Administrative Centre (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2897) and its subsidiary entities. Subsequently, nearly 800 Jehovah's Witnesses have also faced prosecutions and jailings for "continuing the activity of a banned extremist organisation" (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2916).

Roskomnadzor has consequently blocked websites hosting the literature of the Jehovah's Witness and Said Nursi, or otherwise linked to them. It has also blocked sites containing other religious texts which appear on the Federal List of Extremist Materials (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2897).

Blocks sometimes appear to lead to the complete demise of websites. In multiple cases, site owners either deleted them or ceased to pay hosting fees, allowing domain names to become defunct. In such cases, the blocked addresses are put up for sale again by hosting providers (sometimes leading to Roskomnadzor unblocking the addresses) and are often taken over by gambling, dating, or pornography sites.

Publication blocked by demand of Roskomnadzor", whether accessed from within or outside Russia; despite Roskomnadzor notification of inclusion in Unified Registry, does not appear in registry search results and marked by Globalcheck as 100 per cent accessible – may actually have been blocked by Dzen itself.

(Akhilla announced on its website on 4 June 2024 that its Zen channel had been blocked: "Earlier, Roskomnadzor demanded that we remove some 'extremist' materials, such as a song by the group 'Pornoфильм' or a repost of some 'foreign agent'. Then they turned off monetisation, limited the channel only to subscribers, and now they have completely closed it without explaining why exactly.

"However, it is clear anyway: the Russian Ministry of Truth has been diligently explaining to Russians for the third year now: 'war is peace, slavery is freedom', and being an anti-war and anti-totalitarian resource in our time of chauvinism and jingoism is a terrible crime. So if one day you cannot access the 'Akhilla' website, you will know the reason").

(Several users in Moscow have reported that the site fails to load, the site administrator told Forum 18 on 25 September 2024. There is no specific message about a block, and Roskomsvoboda claimed to Forum 18 on 3 September that it is possible that the problems may be local. However, site visitor statistics show that over the last few months there have been no visits from Russia but a large increase in visits from Norway (now up to more than 70 per cent). This suggests the use of VPNs.)

Ukrainian religious websites

Roskomnadzor has specifically blocked several Ukrainian religious websites, but others appear to be inaccessible from within Russia simply because of their .ua domain name (it is unclear whether this is a Russian or Ukrainian restriction, or both).

Name: Islam in Ukraine

Address: <https://islam.in.ua/>

Date of block: 20 January 2023

(Religion in Ukraine stated on 17 September 2024

(<https://www.religion.in.ua/main/51300-religiya-v-ukrayini-destabilizuye-suspilno-politichnu-obstanovku-v-rosijskij-federaciyi-gen-prokuratura-rf.html>) that Roskomnadzor had notified its hosting provider that it had violated the Law on Information:

"It follows from the message that the General Prosecutor's Office of the Russian Federation did not like our work very much, [and has] included our domain in the list of 'Russophobes' who publish 'informational materials aimed at destabilisation of the socio-political situation in the Russian Federation'.

"We were 'given a chance to rehabilitate ourselves' in the eyes of 'Russian justice' by removing the destabilising materials from the site, but since we were not even told what specifically worried them so deeply, we will assume by default that EVERYTHING did. All our analytical materials, our news presentation, after all, our values are the promotion of the idea of church reconciliation and unity and the destruction of the influence of the Moscow Patriarchate on Ukrainian Orthodoxy, not through revenge, hatred and religious war. This is what, in the opinion of Roskomnadzor and the General Prosecutor's Office of the Russian Federation, destabilises the socio-political situation in the Russian Federation and 'creates a threat of a mass violation of public order and/or public safety or a threat of creating obstacles to the functioning or stopping the functioning of life support facilities'.

"We consider the verdict of the General Prosecutor's Office of the Russian Federation a compliment and recognition that we are working effectively.

"How does it threaten us and our readers? For everyone who does not live in Russia - nothing. We continue to work in the same spirit. Unfortunately, Russian readers who are interested in us will be able to read us at best through a VPN. But in order to be able to follow our updates from Russia (and they read us there), 'Religion in Ukraine' plans to start a Telegram channel.

"We thank our admirers and even enemies who have created incredible advertising for the portal".)

Background: now-defunct Yandex Zen channel hosting videos also posted on YouTube; blocking decision dated 24 February 2022; Fr Ioann (formerly of the Moscow Patriarchate, now a member of a branch of the Russian Orthodox Church Outside Russia) posted videos critical of the Russian government and the Moscow Patriarchate before Russia's invasion of Ukraine, then began to condemn the war and the actions of Russian troops; he was prosecuted under Criminal Code Article 207.3 (dissemination of "false information" about the Armed Forces) and sentenced to three years' imprisonment (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2756), from which he was released on 1 August 2024 (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2925).

Name: Lena Sokolova

Address: <https://vk.com/id694689962>

Date of block: after 1 September and before 3 December 2022

Requesting agency: General Prosecutor's Office

Background: blocking decision dated 1 September 2022; page does not appear in Unified Registry and remains accessible within Russia, but with content blocked by VKontakte from the view of Russian users.

(Lena Sokolova is a Russian Christian who opposes the invasion of Ukraine. She set up the Telegram channel "Those scattered by persecution" (https://t.me/christians_together "Rasseyavshiyesya ot goneniya") in March 2022 to maintain communication between Christians in Russia and Ukraine, and has been consistently critical of the war both there and on her VKontakte page, where she continues to post, despite the block:

"You don't need to have any special empathy or wisdom to be against war while living in Russia. History has already shown that among the active opponents of war there have been poorly educated grandmothers who barely remember yesterday, as well as children and teenagers, and housewives. You just need to be fair, or righteous according to the Synodal [Bible]. Impartial. Judge and act righteously, fairly. And not partially, shielding 'your own'. God requires this of us even in the Old Testament.

"Everything is simple and accessible even to a child. Do unto others as you would have them do unto you. This is a principle for the whole world, the whole world knows it. And unbelievers often, to the shame of believers, are more successful in it" (12 July 2024).

Sokolova does not appear to have faced administrative or criminal prosecution.

On 3 August 2024, she responded to a Telegram subscriber who commented that they had stopped using VKontakte: "On the contrary, I began to write there actively with the beginning of the war. We must be the light, and not hide in a Christian bunker".)

Name: Archbishop Viktor Pivovarov

Address: <https://www.youtube.com/@eshatologia>

Date of block: 25 June 2024 – access restored on 26 June 2024

Requesting agency: unknown

Background: channel with videos of sermons taken down with no notification from either Roskomnadzor or YouTube – reinstated the following day after an appeal to Google, but the company offered no explanation; Archbishop Viktor, who has openly and vehemently condemned the Russian invasion of Ukraine in his sermons and writings, was fined 150,000 Roubles (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2904) under Criminal Code Article 280.3 (repeat "discreditation" of the Armed Forces) in April 2024 and his church in Krasnodar Region, which is not affiliated with the Moscow Patriarchate, has been threatened with demolition (https://www.forum18.org/archive.php?article_id=2911); the church website <https://eshatologia.org> appears never to have been blocked.

(On 20 May 2024, independent Russian news outlet Agentstvo noted that YouTube had blocked three videos (<https://www.agents.media/youtube-has-begun-blocking-opposition-content-at-the-request-of-the-russian-authorities>) about avoiding military mobilisation on the "Dozor v Volgograd" and "Shkola prizyvnik" channels, and had informed OVD-Info of a possible block on its whole channel. Agentstvo commented that this may indicate a change in YouTube's approach to requests from the Russian authorities.

YouTube restored direct links to the videos the day after Agentstvo's article, Radio Liberty reported on 22 May 2024 (<https://www.svoboda.org/a/ostalsya-tenevoy-ban-kak-youtube-blokiroval-oppozitsionnyy-kontent-/32958050.html>), but the videos still did not appear in searches and probably not in recommendations – a "shadow ban", according to Yevgeny Kochegin of "Dozor v Volgograd".

In 2023, Google fulfilled more than 50 per cent of Roskomnadzor requests, mostly about YouTube; more than 30,000 requests were based on political reasons – Google does not say in its report how many requests in this category it upheld (other requests were regarding copyright infringement, fraud, suicide, and illegal drugs.)
